Introduction

This catalog is an inventory of Applications Technology Satellites (ATS) -I and -III images obtained between 1966 and 1974. The listing includes the date and time of the image and sequence number for images on each day. On some days, the sequence of images may be incomplete.

The Applications Technology Satellites are most noted for the spin scan camera which flew on both of them. Foremost in the development of this camera was Verner E. Suomi of the Space Science and Engineering Center. The spin scan camera was proposed for the Applications Technology Satellites, ATS-1 and ATS-3, and implemented by the Santa Barbara Research Center.

Until 1965, forecasters seldom used satellite data. With the advent of the spin scan camera came the ability to view images of cloud patterns on a worldwide basis and for the first time, storms could be seen at least once a day.

In 1966, when the ATS-1 was launched into geosynchronous orbit, weather could be viewed continuously over an area from 70 N to 70 S and from Africa westward to the Pacific. The ability to obtain satellite imagery at 20-minute intervals from the geosynchronous satellite allowed the meteorologist to view pictures in sequence, thereby creating a "movie" of weather developments. This development has radically improved the ability of forecasters to predict local severe weather.
